Owosso area aviation appears to have started in the early 1900s. The Owosso City Directory for 1924, lists a couple of pilots, one being a Mr. Bud Hammond - air mail pilot, owner of Hammond Air Service

In those early days, you had to land in your own back yard or someone's pasture. And Bud was quite a pilot, even had his first license signed by Orville Wright. Bud was responsible for the first mail contract from Mackinaw Island and Beaver Island. By the mid 1920s, he owned a more formal grass airstrip that was located north of Owosso, just south of Dean Dr. on the east side of —52 and it was called Hammond Field. It consisted of an East-West grass runway and a quonset style hangar.

In 1928, Owosso had more privately owned airplanes than any other city in Michigan outside of Detroit, according to Bud.

On August 3, 1929, a dedication was held for a newly developed airport, owned by Robert Wilcox and Charles Wilson.

The Owosso Airport Co. was located at the present site of the Owosso Community Airport - 205 Airport Drive (1510 E. Main St. - old street address, but same location). It had a north-south grass runway located directly south of Arby's on M-21.
